NEW YORK JAPAN SOCIETY RECOGNITION OF SERVICES

FORMED AT LUNCH GIVEN BY GEN. KUROKI AT NEW YORK.

Organisation to Cultivate Friendly Relations Between United States and Japan-Visitors Pleased.

NEW YORK, May 20,-Gen. Baron Kuoki demonstrated to about sixty guests at luncheon he gave in the Hotel Astor yeserday that Japanese courtesy is so precous a thing that its very essence may depend upon the grouping of roses in a jar or the spraying of the table with sweetscented lilies. The rose and the lily played as great a part in the little farewell affair he general provided for the honor of his American and Japanese friends of New York as the host himself.

It may be assumed that some member of Gen. Kuroki's personal staff had in charge the conversion of the small banquet room on the eighth floor of the hotel into as near an approach to the famous gardens of the Kwoyo Kwan or Maple Club at Tokio as the limitations of the interior would allow. So dense was the foliage of palm and flowering bush about the ends of the bandwar that the walters were lost for flowering bush about the ends of the ban-quet room that the waiters were lost for minutes as they came and went. About the north end of the tables there had been erected a dais for the musicians, smothered erected a dais for the musicians, smothered in greenery, and behind this a broad canvas cunningly lit with hidden electric lights, which showed moonlight on a rippling river.

The one long oval table was darkened with red stains, where banks of roses showed in the dim light of the shaded candles. The damask was striped with smilax woven into arabesques. At every place there were sprays of lilies of the valley so heavy with perfume that the room was filled with the odor.

The Guests.

Gen. Kuroki, severely buttoned up in frock coat, sat at the middle of the table, with Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant on his right hand and the ever-faithful Capt. Tanaka very near, so that he might serve as the medium for the exchange of pleasantries with the American guests to right and left. Gen. O. E. Wood and Major Lynch, the two army officers who have been attached to Kuroki's staff since his arrival in America, sat with some of the uniformed officers from Japan. Across the tables Gen. Grant sat with a Japanese woman, who wore the soft tinted garb of her country.

Others who were among the invited gut ts were Seth Low, Major Seaman, E. H. Harriman, August Belmont, Cornelius Bliss, President Finley of the College of the City of New York, Col. Scott, Robert A. C. Smith, Dr. Takemine, Consul General Kolke, Col. Nagayama, Mr. Mural, Mr. Okura and Gen. Stewart L. Woodford. A few of the Japanese guests were accompanied by their wives, and there was a smattering of American women. on his right hand and the ever-faithful

Women.

When the luncheon was nearing a close Gen. Grant arose and proposed the health of the host. Capt. Tanaka was swift to get to Kuroki's chair and tell him what was doing. The little general bowed low, while every one stood and pledged. Then Gen. Grant at him in sauterne. tempted to give full voice to a "Banzai," pronouncing the cheer very broadly. Instantly the Japanese guests took up the cue and a very healthy Sunday afternoon cheer jumped about the tables,

International Society. Next Lindsay Russell rose to launch what was designed to be a surprise to the general. He said:

"Gen. Baron Kuroki, on behalf of the committee we have the honor to announce that as one of the results of your visit to America and in order that we may renew from time to time the international courtesies which it has prompted there has been formed a Japan Society of New York, having for its object the cultivation of friendly relations between this country and yours. We shall always cherish the memory of your visit to the United States, which will no doubt become a part of our history, even as the visit of Commodore Perry is memorable in Japan for more than half a century.

During the applause that greeted Mr. Russel's announcement Capt. Tanaka hurried snapping sentences of translation into the general's ear. When he had finished Gen. Kuroki rose and lifted up his wineglass. He said a few words in Japanese, which Capt. Tanaka instantly translated: "Gen. Baron Kuroki, on behalf of the which Capt. Tanaka instantly translated:

"I am very much pleased with the announcement you have just made of the establishment of a Japan Society in New York. I drink to the health of that association with all my heart."

There were more cheers at that and then the guests began to rise from their seats. Gen. Kuroki stood smiling by his seat and bowed low to each one as he passed by.

HIBERNIANS PRESENT WATCH TO PRESIDENT HALTIGAN.

Meeting of Division 2, Over Which He

Patrick J. Haltigan, president of Division No. 2 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and editor of the official organ of the so ciety's paper, published in this city, was signally honored at a meeting of the division yesterday afternoon at the Eagles' Hall, on E street. The occasion was the presentation of a handsome watch to Mr. Haltigan on the part of the members of the division, "in recognition of his notable services to Division No. 2, A. O. H., and to the society at large as its official editor.' In connection with the presentation peans of praise were sung by local and national officers of the A. O. H., to which an admiring audience lent its most enthusiastic appreciation by applause. It seemed to be the universal opinion of It seemed to be the universal opinion of the gathering that the occasion brought forth a notable list of speakers affiliated with the organization, who, in addition to applauding the attainments of Mr. Haltigan, touched on a great many matters of consummate interest to the Irish race. After the division had disposed of a lot of routine business, including the reception of a large number of new members, P. T. Moran, national director of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, took up the presiding Moran, national director of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, took up the presiding officer's gavel. Mr. Moran paid tribute to President Haltigan, declaring that the latter served his division and the society at large with the utmost zeal and fidelity, and adding that he was "liked and loved by the membership all over the United States." "He has," said the speaker, "done a tremendous amount of good through his pen and personality to an extent that has not failed to leave its impress upon the 200,000 members of the Å. O. H. throughout this land. His achievements are of a character that speak much for his sturdy uprightness of purpose, and he is not only laboring diligently and intelligently for Hibernians, but is raising a nice big family which, in the years to come, will be an honor to Hibernianism."

Presentation Speech. Rossa F. Downing, chairman of the comnittee in charge of the affair, made the presentation speech. Summing up Mr. Haltigan's connection with the division, Mr. Downing declared that there never had been an officer or member of the division who an officer or member of the division who had done as much for it as Mr. Haltigan, "This is but a slight appreciation of the services rendered by Mr. Haltigan," said the speaker, "when it is considered that during his three years' term as president the membership of this division has doubled." The watch which Mr. Downing presented on behalf of the membership of the division bears the following inscription:

Mr. Haltigan signified his acceptance in an appreciative address.

Dr. William J. O'Brien of Philadelphia, a member of the national board of directors of the A. O. H., paid a warm tribute to Mr. Haltigan in his official capacity.

"Mr. Haltigan is, I dare say, as well known and admired in Philade'phia as in his own city," said the speaker, "and his influence for the uplifting of the society has been as potent throughout the country. We Hibernians in Philadelphia look for the National Hibernian, our official organ, with as much interest and expectancy as we do for our favorite afternoon newspaper. You

In exp'aining his affection for the Irish race and nation Dr. O'Brien said that though he had never seen the green hills of Ireland, nor had his father before him, there was something in Irish blood that cannot be stamped out, no matter how many generations pass.

"We must not forget," he said, "that Ireland looks to us for support, and we should give it. As regards the means to ameliorate the existing conditions in the Emerald Isle I am opposed to nothing, but am interested in all methods for its relief. We have great cause for hope. No peop'e are more devoted to their mother country than is the Irish race, and I hope that circumstances may so shape themselves that Ireland may be free. It Ireland ever had such a fair proposition of government as that of Belgium she would soon reach a population of 20,000,000. Instead, under the existing order of things, she has dwindled from 8,000,000 to 4,000,000 people, and if matters are not remedied imm's ration will decrease the population still further."

Other Addresses.

Rev. Dr. Patrick J. Healy, assistant proessor of church history of the Catho lic University of America, next took the platform in eulogy of President Haltigan. His tribute contained advice to the membership of Division No. 2, and he said: Would you pay the highest possible tribute to Mr. Haltigan, exemplify his ideals Dr. Joseph Dunn, professor of Gaelic at the Catholic University of America, followed his culogy with a thought or two on matters of interest to the Irish race at this time. "The government bill and the world's fair to be held this year in Ireland press now for attention. While the fate of this measure is problematical and uncertain, we should bend every energy to assure the success of the latter. This fair will stimulate interest in Irish trade, and by this means we shall set the tide of immigration flowing to the Emerald Isle again. There is a warning to the Irish race in the large number of Hebrews, English and Italians settling in Ireland. In order to best conserve the interests of the Irish race we must stimulate the manufactures of the old country, have a registered trade the Catholic University of America, folbest conserve the interests of the Irish race we must stimulate the manufactures of the old country, have a registered trade mark for genuine Irish goods and encourage the people of our race to at least once and a while buy something of Irish production, which shall be guaranteed by the trade mark. A permanent industrial exaibit in all of the large cities of this country would help matters greatly. If some measures for the relief of Irish trade are not taken I fear the Irish race will become practically extinct in the Emerald Isle."

James D. Flynn delivered an address in Gaelic that aroustd much enthusiasm.

The speaker gave a brief outline of the condition of the masses through the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and "how thew gere ground down by every conceivable method of persecution." In regard to the Gaelic revival in London and Ireland, Mr. Flynn said in the former city no less than eighteen private classes are organized and four public ones, whose teachers are paid by the government to teach Gaelic on a par with other languages.
